

ALLISON INQUIRY

Listening to Canadian Covid-19 Vaccine Injured

The Allison Inquiry will be listening to the testimony of Canadians injured by a Covid-19 vaccine. This represents the first time that Canadian lawmakers will be listening to Canadians about their experiences with the Covid-19 vaccines.

Chaired by Member of Parliament Dean Allison, the inquiry is non-partisan, and Members of Parliament and Senators from all parties are eligible to sit as panel members.

All Canadians who believe they have been injured by a Covid-19 vaccine are invited to apply to be a witness.
