ALLISON INQUIRY UPDATE – LISTENING TO CANADIAN COVID-19 VACCINE INJURED

On September 8, 9, 10 and 11, 2026, the Allison Inquiry heard testimony from Canadians injured by Covid-19 vaccines. Canadians from across the country gave their testimony live from Parliament Hill in Ottawa.

The injured Canadians who testified, at great physical and emotional cost, have done the nation a service. The raw honesty of their testimony has shaken all who have watched the Inquiry.

The Allison Inquiry is the first inquiry in Canada in which Members of Parliament have listened to Canadians injured by the Covid-19 vaccines.

The Allison Inquiry has ignited a discussion about Covid-19 vaccine injuries within Canada and around the world.

On November 5 at 10 a.m., MP Dean Allison will hold a press conference in Parliament's Press Gallery. Updates on the Inquiry's progress and the challenges it faces will be shared.

The Inquiry has revealed issues concerning accountability and transparency that will be discussed.

The federal and provincial governments will be called upon to explain a concerning issue raised during the Inquiry.
